

Viking longships by Henley and Harley

What were they for?

They use longships for fishing and traveling. Raid, a ship could be hauled up on a beach and the men inside the ships could sail at about ten mph.

How big were they?

A big viking longship was about 30 metres long and could carry 60 men.

How were they built?

They were made from planks of oak wood joined together.

